RICHMOND COUNTY RESIDENT WINS SERVICE AWARD

ATLANTA – Richmond County resident Nancy K. Graham received the Donna Glass Non-Physician Distinguished Service Award at the Medical Association of Georgia’s 157th House of Delegates meeting at Callaway Gardens in Pine Mountain on October 15. The award honors a non-physician for contributions to the advancement and support of medicine.

Graham was nominated for the award by the Richmond County Medical Society (RCMS), where she has been employed since 1981. Under the direction of the late James R. Lyle, she was initially responsible for the society’s daily operations, including membership and meeting coordination.

The organization says that Graham’s role has grown increasingly pronounced over her 30-year career with RCMS. In particular, she has become an effective advocate for recruiting and retaining RCMS members. RCMS says she also plays an instrumental role in ensuring that RCMS sends a full delegation to the Medical Association of Georgia’s House of Delegates meeting each year.

RCMS says that Graham has a “wonderful rapport” with RCMS member physicians and their families. In nominating her for the MAG award, RCMS also touted Graham for her “great relationship” with the Richmond County Medical Society Alliance – adding that the Alliance recognized her outstanding service with an award in 1999.

Finally, RCMS also said that she has “strong leadership ability, which belies her sweet nature…with Ms. Graham in her role at RCMS, we trust that the society’s operations will run smoothly and that we will be well represented within the state.”

Graham resides in Augusta.

With more than 6,500 members, MAG is the leading voice for the medical profession in Georgia. MAG membership is up by more than 12 percent in the last year. Go to www.mag.org for additional information.
